Rockefeller, 66, Nominated To Vice-Presidency by Ford

Veteran in International Affairs

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (1HT). President Ford today nominated former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller to be his vice-president, declaring that Mr. Rockefeller would be "a good partner for me . . . for our country and the world."

The 65-year-old multimillionaire, who served three previous presidents in both foreign policy and domestic affairs posts before his election to four terms as governor, told Mr. Ford he was 'humble" and honored at being chosen and was prepared to serve under him and "through you . . . all the people of this great country."

Congress must approve the nomination. Senate and House leaders from both parties hailed

Mr. Rockefeller's selection and said they expected no obstacles to quick confirmation.

The Senate Rules and Administration Committee immediately began an investigation into the nominee's background to prepare for confirmation hearings.

The former governor's financial worth has been estimated at close to $1 billion. He said today that he would probably put his holdings in a blind trust and make any required financial disclosures to Congress. As Vice-President, he would be paid $60,000 a year.

President Ford has been in of-fice only 11 days, after succeed-ing Richard Nixon, who resigned on Aug. 9. Mr. Rockefeller is an interna-

Ethiopia Seeks Dialogue With Eritrean Rebels

Premier Michael Imru said today that he wanted a "peaceful dialogue" with North Ethlopia guerrillas and announced that he would send Defense Minister Aman Michael Andom to Eritrea Province on Monday to study the problem.

His statement raised hopes for an end to the province's 12-yearold guerrills war, which has contributed to the unrest here since military coup six months ago. He said he offended some Chinese girls in their early 20s when he asked them if they had boyfriends. No. they said, their education had yet to be completed,

Mr. Kissinger's dual approach -a pledge to step up American spending on strategic arms if necessary to match the Russians and an offer to negotiate energetically-did not differ in approach from Mr. Schlesinger's warning.

Little New Ground

In reviewing the world situation, Mr. Kissinger broke little ground. He said that there would constantly be crises, such as in Cyprus, and "our attitude will be that we cannot be the world's policeman but that we will always use our influence for peace and conciliation."

On specific issues, he expressed unhappiness with the recent cuts voted by the House and by Senate and House committees on military and economic aid for South Vietnam.

"We must strengthen the ability of the peoples of Indochina to determine their own destiny," Mr. Kissinger said, "After a decade of war, and the loss of 50,000 American lives, some hesitate to give to South Vietnam-for whom the war has not yet ended—the help it so desperately needs to maintain itself as an independent

"It would be tragic, it would break faith with all those Americans who have fought and died there, if we now fall to make the relatively modest effort that the administration has proposed to the Congress to enable South Vietnam to survive," he said.

House Unit Airs Draft Health Insurance Bill

By Stuart Auerbach

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (WP). The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday released a draft outline of a health insur-ance bill that would limit an average family's medical costs to $1,000 a year in 1976.

An amalgamation of several bills before Congress, the draft was prepared over the weekend by committee staff members and experts from the Ford administration. It will form the basis of discussions all week by committee members, who hope to draw up a bill this week.

Frank Carincel, under secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said the administration approved the plan in general although it had reservations about some parts.

who is a co-sponsor of the

"cradle-to-grave" health-insur-ance plan supported by labor, said he could vote for the draft plan if it contained controls on

Disagreement on Costs The committee staff estimated the added costs to the government at $7.3 billion a year but administration experts said they

The draft plan resembles a bill submitted in February by former President Richard Nixon. But it provides for lower cost sharing of medical bills and tougher cost controls on doctors and hospitals.

It gives the private health insurance industry a major role-allowing the industry to write the basic coverage that every employer must supply to his workers. Other bills would have either eliminated the insurance industry, or, as in a measure sponsored ways and means chairman Wilbur Mills, D-Ark, and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., re-duced them to a subsidiary role.

Regulation by States

The insurance industry, however, would be regulated by the states under federal guidelines. And the companies would have to pay 90 cents of every premium dollar in benefits a restriction that some companies indicated could kill their profits.

Employers and workers would share the premium costs of the basic health insurance policy, estimated at $220 a year for a

In an effort to make sure that all workers agree to buy health insurance, the committee drafters made participation in the basic plan a requirement for catastrophic coverage.

The committee staff estimated rost of catastrophic coverage at s? billion a year, with three-fourths paid by employers and one-fourth by the workers.

Vexing Question Over Number Affected

Amnesty Issue Keeps Alive U.S. Antagonisms

By Paul L. Montgomery

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (NYT) --Twenty months after American troops stopped fighting in Vietnam, the issue of what to do about the tens of thousands of young men who avoided military service remains a bitterly divisive

In congressional hearings, presidential news conferences and other public forums, the issues involved in granting amnesty to deserters and draft-evaders or punishing them, have kept alive the domestic antagonisms aroused by the war itself. President Ford told a Veterans of Foreign Wers convention in Chicago yesterday that he had ordered a review of the question. He did not indicate how he would resolve it. But he did say that he would "throw the weight of my presidency into the scales of jus-tice on the side of leniency."]

One vexing question in the amnesty issue is how many men would be affected if it were granted. In his speech, President Ford cited "some 50,000 of our countrymen convicted, charged, under investigation or still sought for violations of the Selective Service Act or the Uniform Code of Military Justice."

That figure would include 28,561 listed by the Defense Department as deserters from the armed forces from July 1, 1966, to Dec. 31, 1973, and still "at large." It would also include 4,400 men listed by the Justice Department as fugitives from indictments for violation of the draft laws. Presumably, the balance of the 50,000 would include 9,167 persons convicted of violations during the war, and others whose cases are

The total, however, is drawn from a much larger number of cases. The Defense Department, for example, says that from July 1, 1960, to Dec. 31, 1973, there were 503.926 "incidents of desertion" defined as absence without leave for 30 days or more. In the case of draft-law violations, the Selective Service system reported that from 1963 through 1973 there were 191,840 cases of men failing to respond to directives from draft boards. However, 80 per cent of the group did respond when given second or third notices. The Justice Department prosecuted 9,118 viola-tors, and indictments were dismissed against 10,153 others; 4,400 were indicted and fled.

The Defense Department says that 2,099 of its 28,661 "at large" cases are known to be outside the United States, primarily in Canada and Sweden, The Justice Department estimates that, of its 4,400 fugitives, 2,400 are out of the country.

Binding Up the Wounds

Gerald Ford has moved with sagacity and no small degree of political courage toward his primary goal as President-that of binding up the nation's wounds. He elaborated on this theme in various modes in his first address to Congress; he stated it specifically, and proposed to implement it, before a potentially hostile audience, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, in the form of a "second chance" for the Vietnamese war draft evaders and deserters. And, in a very real sense, he climaxed his initial efforts toward national conciliation by sending the name of Nelson Rockefeller to the Congress for confirmation as Vice-President of the United States.

President Ford has been known as a conservative Republican. His links to the liberals of his party, as well as to the Democratic majority, have been founded on personal, congressional association, and they have proved strong and useful, ever since former President Nixon nominated him for the vice-presidency after Mr. Agnew's resignation. Mr. Rockefeller, although his course as governor of New York and in national politics has moderated considerably in recent years, still represents the liberal wing of the Republicans, and thus will be acceptable to many Democrats as well as to Republicans of his own persuasion.

At the same time, the dissonances of the party since its catastrophe in 1964, when the Republicans polarized around Rockefeller and Sen. Goldwater, have found more harmonious notes. From the standpoint of partisan symbolism and personalities, it would seem that the President has found, as he put it, "a good partner" in Nelson Rockefeller-good for his administration and for the country.

Nelson Rockefeller has more concrete benefits to offer than the symbols of past conflicts, of course. He has long experience in administration and policy-making at high levels; he is familiar with foreign affairsa point at which Mr. Ford is weak-and had an early and productive relationship with the Secretary of State, Mr. Kissinger. He can make the vice-presidency become a constructive force in national government.

Therefore, in this first occasion in its nearly two centuries of history in which the United States will have both a President and a Vice-President who were not chosen by the people at large, the first time in which an administration must seek, in office, a mandate which it has not won by popular election. Mr. Ford has taken a long stride toward such a mandate by his choice of Mr. Rockefeller. Both recognize that their tasks will be more difficult by reason of the manner in which they attained office, no less than by the circumstances under which they won it and the complex legacy they inherit. But both will profit, as Mr. Rockefeller said in accepting the vice-presidential nomination, by the fact that President Ford has, through acts as well as words, "reawakened faith and hope" among his countrymen.

'A Second Chance'

In his wise and compassionate statement on the much-debated subject of amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders, President Ford has demonstrated his fidelity to the principle that the rule of law applies to all Americans but that its application necessitates no conflict between the noble aims of mercy and justice. He took the opportunity to say what he did in the lion's den-the annual convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. which has heretofore taken a hard line on amnesty—and emerged unscathed and newly respected.

By sending forth a generous instead of an unforgiving signal to Congress and the armed forces which, as President, he commands, Mr. Ford has opened the way for new legislation and new thinking in the country. Speaking as veteran, lawyer and champion of a strong military establishment, he gave tacit approval to the resolution passed last week by the American Bar Association that would allow individual draft resisters to earn immunity from prosecution.

He has asked the attorney general and the secretary of defense to provide the facts. first of all, on the status of some $0,000 offenders-whom he compassionately called "our countrymen"-accused of violating the Selective Service Act or the Uniform Code of Military Justice. These men would not be lumped together as "draft-dodgers" or "deserters" but treated as individuals, their cases studied within the framework of legal precedents.

For these men the President seeks "a second chance." His view is that they should be regarded not as enemies but as "casualties" and allowed to work their way back home to America. The Ford approach, without going all the way toward amnesty, would remove the attitude of revenge by law; and that is the beginning of justice.

President Ford cited two Presidents -Abraham Lincoln and Harry & Truman—as his zuldes. He omitted his immediate predecessor. The Civil War and World War II Presidents both demonstrated a spirit of generosity toward deserters and issued many pardons. President Lincoln did so while the war still raged: President Truman created a postwar amnesty board that judged draft evaders and deserters on a case-by-case basis.

nettle of amnesty, they will have President Ford's own bold words to guide them: "I am throwing the weight of my presidency into the scales of justice on the side of leniency." THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Crucial Turkish Pledge

One modest but essential step toward restoring peace on Cyprus will be taken if Turkey makes good its promise to Secretary of State Kissinger for a negotiated pullback from some of the territory it has occupied and for reduction of its forces on the island. It would be better still if the Turks unllaterally ordered some territorial and troop withdrawals in advance by way of creating a better climate for new negotiations.

The assurances Mr. Kissinger says he has received from Premier Bulent Ecevit are nonetheless of considerable importance, especially the "understanding" that the Turkish occupation zone could be reduced in size, that the demarcation line between Turkish and Greek Cypriot areas is negotiable, and that Turkey is prepared to carry out the Geneva agreements for phased troop cuts.

It may be of even greater long-run significance that the secretary of state - with President Ford's backing - has made the point directly to Mr. Ecevit that Washington believes it necessary for Turkey, "as the stronger power on the ground, to display flexibility and a concern for Greek sensitivities" on the matters of territory and the size of military forces. It is late in the Cyprus disaster to make such a point; but it can still have impact if Mr. Kissinger demonstrates that he means it.

A grim reminder of the necessity for an all-out Washington effort to help bring the Cyprus cataclysm under control was provided on Monday with the horrifying death of Ambassador Rodger P. Davies at the hands of a Greek Cypriot mob laying siege to the American Embassy in Nicosia. Ambassador Davies is only one of thousands of casualties from a tragedy that more sensitive and realistic diplomacy by all governments concerned, including his own, might have pre-

Greek Army Upheaval

Although Greek Premier Constantine Caramaniis has fired a number of army officers. he has not given commanding position to democratic officers dismissed by the defunct junta.... The decision was not taken lightly. This miniature purge of the Greek high military command has sparked upheavals inside the high defense council called into session to discuss the clear responsibility of some generals in the Cyprus tragedy. . . .

In fact the network of friends and supporters that the junta had in the armed forces has not been disrupted by the firing or shifting of a handful of generals. Mr. Caramanlis couldn't or wouldn't call upon the hundreds of truly democratic officers who have been set aside by the dictatorship and who do not seem to be about to be rehabilitated.

Assured of the unanimous support of public opinion and of all the left-wing parties who urge him to move forward. Mr. Caramanlis has chosen-because of his temperament or from necessity - a prudent course which can be seen also in the renewed dialogue with the United States which must simultaneously pull itself out of the Cyprus quagmire, seduce Greek leaders to make them attend the [Geneva] negotiations and put pressure-not too much-on Ankara. A tough task....

Priest Baptizes U.S. Child Who Was Denied Rite

MARLBORO, Mass., Aug. 20 (AP).—A Roman Catholic priest today baptized a child who had been denied the ceremony be-cause of his mother's support of a proposed abortion clinic.

The Rev. Joseph O'Rourke of New York noured holy water on 3-month-old Nathaniel Morreale as his mother, Carol, 20, watched. The rite took place on the steps of Immaculate Conception Church

Bill Baird, director of the Parents Aid Society, which operates abortion clinics on Long Islend and in Boston, was also present. Mrs. Morreale's support of Mr. Baird's plan to open an abortion clinic in Marlboro led two local priests to refuse to baptize Nathaniel. They said they were uncertain that the child would be raised properly within the Cathelic faith.

A crowd of about 300 cheered and applauded as Father O'Rourke haptized the baby. The door of the church was locked but its paster, the Right Rev Francis Meehan, made no attempt to stop the ceremony.

Afterward, Father O'Rourke said, "This is one of the greate/t celebrations of life I've ever been

Dogs Fare Well at New York Summer Camp

By Judy Klemesrud

MARGARET VILLE, N.Y. Aug. 20 (NYT).—At Campo Lindo near here, a camper named Dino is "scared of thunder," according to a note from his home in the Bronx. Winston must be fed corn flakes with milk every morn-ing, and a snack before bedtime-preferably a chocolate chip cookie. And Sandy has to be watched closely so she doesn't snatch food from other campers' dishes.

Although Campo Lindo may sound like every other American summer camp, it isn't. It's for

The farm has a pond for the campers' daily swims. plus two exercise pens and a training area. Each camper has his own red dog house, called a "ounk."

There is some homesickness. An Italian greybound was nervous and shaky for hours before he calmed down. Mr. de Strulle and his nine "counselors" try to alleviate those jitters by instructing the owners to send the dogs' food and water dishes, their toys and instructions on what they normally eat.

How else would the counselors have learned that Rocky, a poodle, eats barbecued chicken -and only on a plate?

Mr. de Strulle, a former record producer and trader in commodities and securities, said he got the idea for a dog camp one day when he was sent out town on business and had to find a place in Manhattan to house his two huskies.

"I went around to all the kennels and saw a lot of lice and fleas and closed-in cages and I thought, There must be some sort of alternative boarding."

he said, "This is it." The cost to send a dog to camp is $40 a week or $150 a month, including door-to-door pick-up and delivery. Special training lessons are extra ($100 a week for obedience training. $125 a week for protection training). And for an extra $1 a day, a dog will receive what is known as "in-house" treatment.

"That means the camper will sleep in the house at night, at the foot of a counselor's bed," Mr. de Strulle said. "Charlie, a Yorkshire terrier, is doing that now because he is shy."

So far, according to Mr. de Strulle and his counselors, no campers have escaped, been injured become pregnant or so homesick that they had to go

The officials said that more than 2,500 Communist troops had been killed.

The Saigon command announced today that substantial numbers of airborne troops were sent north a week ago to try to regain the lost territory. Field reports said: the paratroopers were meeting heavy resistance.

The government reported that an army headquarters at Mang Buk, in the Central Highlands, was apparently overrun early to-day after an attack that began yesterday. A spokesman said the fate of the 300-man garrison was not known.

The district town's 5,000 civilians had been evacuated several months ago, the spokesman said. A communiqué said that an assault on the headquarters and its outposts began at dawn yes-terday and that by dusk the North Vietnamese attackers had fired 800 rounds of artillery at the defenders. Radio contact was lost shortly after midnight.

Mang Buk is 30 miles west of Minh Long, one of the two dis-trict towns overrun earlier by the Communists. Stragglers from Minh Long were still filtering back to government lines today. The Saigon command said about 200 men had returned.

The Viet Cong said the government had about 500 troops at Minh Long, and "hundreds were put out of action." It said 6,000. civilians were "liberated."

Thuong Duc, another district town 25 miles southwest of Denang, was overrun on Aug. 7 and only about 50 of more than 500 soldiers who were there have turned up, according to field re-

Under the urging of his newfound and generous producer, Visconti is reactivating the most ambitious project of his career, a screen version of Thomas Mann's gigantic novel "The Magic Mountain" that vast fictional fresco of European civilization on the eve of World War I with its setting in a tuberculosis sanatorium in the Swiss Alps.

"I have worked on my adaptation of that great book for some years and have discussed it with Mann's son, Golo," he explained. It is, of course, selective, as no film even one running for 10 hours, could reproduce the original in toto. The main currents of the novel will be retained and all the characters, even the minor ones, though they will be less elaborately drawn, the cinema being a medium of rapid characterization. U.S. Agency Blasted for Loan to Luxury Fortress'

By Tom Zito WASHINGTON (WP).—The Habitation Leclerc. a fortress of luxury opened in January by Olivier Coquelin (IHT, Jan. 7). sits in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, the surrounding squalor kept at bay by walls and guards.

Last week grumblings on Capitol Hill reached the tropical re-sort. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, complained that the U.S. government Overseas Private Investment Corp. had lent the Leclerc operators $415,000 to open the hotel. He said it was "outrageous that a U.S. government agency would lend government funds for the erection of a hotel which ... caters exclusively to the ultra-rich. This extravagant pleasure dome ... is surrounded by high walls with broken glass coverings and is patrolled by guards to keep out the poor Haitians who live directly outside the hotel. The Haitians' per cap-ita income of $113 is less than two days' lodging cost at this

"He doesn't know what he is talking about," said Coquelin. 44, the French-born proprietor who is now a U.S. citizen. Among Coquelin's enterprises: Le Club. Cheetah and the Hippotamus discotheque, all in New York, Although Coquelin is the principal owner of the Haltian resort, 10 of his friends have invested in it, including George Plimpion. Count Egon von Purstenberg and rock star Mick Jagger.

This hotel is for Middle America, said Coquelin. The people in New York do not come much. My friend Marion Javits. wife of New York Republican Sen. Jacob Javits: has not even been once. It is not fast enough for her lifestyle."

The Agency

OPIC is a government agency that insures bank loans to U.S. citizens interested in opening businesses in underdeveloped nations. In the Leclerc case, the agency extended its first and thus far only direct loan to a hotel because, according to OPIC vice-president for public alfairs Thomas Sedlar. "a hotel like this can be very beneficial to the country of Haiti and the Haitian government wanted it very much.

"It was felt that what was needed was tourism-the kind of people who will go to the coun-try and spend money buying local art and using local transportation. The operators of the Habitation Lecierc were baving trouble finding a bank to finance their needs, and we lelt this was a worthwhile project."

Sediar cites a report by the Government Accounting Office. prompted last year after criticism of the resort by Rep. Les Aspin. D-Wis: "We believe that increased tourism, including that of affluent tourists, can be an appropriate vehicle for promoting the development of a country and that private U.S., capital and skills can be effectively used in members would be. promoting such development. We believe also that OPIC's approval of the Habitation Leclerc project. Was a legitimate attempt to accomplish those objectives in Hai-

But Church says that the "GAO ought to be investigated. I disagree completely with their conclusions. The high-sounding purposes for which the American capital is spent on aid often bears no relation to the actual investment being made. They're designed to create schisms, and this kind of luxury hotel facility does

"OPIC financing for hotels like the Habitation Leclerc is a per-version of any acceptable definition of foreign assistance. The hotel's top management is North American and white: the busboys, waiters, maids and groundskeepers are native blacks Moreover, the hotel will yield little income to Haitians since the hotel is expecting a 10-year tax holiday and an exemption from most customs duties from the Haitian government."

Church is not alone in his analysis of the situation. When Washington Post reporter visited Haiti in March, he was told by a young art gallery operator: The entire concept of a project like the Lectere is wrong.

What happens with a hotel like this is that the rich get richer and the poor get poorer. It widens the gulf between the two They will tell you, 'We are git-ing people jobs.' Perhaps this is true on one level, but they are really making black Haitians who work there the servants of white Americans. This is not what foreign aid to an underdeveloped country should be. What value does a man get from carrying a martini to a rich businessman sitting beside a swimming pool?" Coquelin says that the Leclerc hired 3,000 people to help build the hotel and now employs 200 on a full-time basis. "Before us," he says, "everybody thought Haiti was The Comedians' with some kind of nuts operating as dictators. No bank would touch it. OPIC gave me an umbrella of credibility."

Foreign Relations Multinational Corporations Subcommittee say that Sen. Javits is frequently referred to as "the father of OPIC," since in 1968 he sponsored legislation that created the agency and later almost single-handedly decided who its 11 presidentially appointed board

But don't believe that the senator had anything to do with the loan," says Coquelin, "Yes, am a friend of his wife, but she didn't even tell me about OPIC: someone else did. I didn't believe it possible, but I walked in the front door and they gave me a loan."

Sedlar says Coquehn's loan re quest went through normal channels and took about six months for approval.

The Crowds

Reports from other hotel operators in Port-au-Prince indicate that the Habitation Leclere may not be drawing the kinds of crowds it had hoped

They're really not doing that well at all." says one hotel manager in a neighboring resort ares "A lot of young, wealthy Haitians are going to the discothèque there on weekends, but they've rarely gotten more than a dozen guests staying there." In March there were fewer than 20 guests at the hotel. A desk clerk said that only 14 of the 44 tillas were ready for occupancy. Four guests were eating at an expensive restaurant in a nearb; town. "The food at Hanitation Leclere is medible," said "We've been there a day and it feels like a week."

The gallery operator who criticized the OPIC lean also criticized the hotel's attitude toward its native neighbors. "Every day they spread out a huge buffet and rather than give the unused food to the people, they just throw it away. Their idea of charity was to paint the bordellos and shacks around the perimeter to make the area look less depressing."

Coquelin denies that food is being thrown away. "We save everything." he says. "And even if we didn't, we do not have a responsibility like the Salvation Army to feed every person in the country." Of reports that the Habitation Leclerc is not attracting visitors. Coquelin says that the hotel was 100 per cent booked in January and February and has been 60 percent full since. "He may be half filling the place up," said another hotel owner, "but it's with travel agents on free junkets."

Yes, said Sedlar of OPIC. "he's getting travel agents down there to really promote the place He knows how to push. Naturally, if they don't meet their financial obligations, we'll inreclose the loan. We'll take over the property and turn the goddamned thing into a numery."

at flowering time, you would discover that the small chustered white or greenish-yellow flowers give off, inexplicably, a rather unplessant odor. Cinnamic scid, extracted from the tree, has no smell at all; though it is used in perfumes, it is only because it is useful in preparing esters, but eugenol, a colorless liquid derived either from cinnamon or cloves, goes into perfume for its fragrance and into cooking for its taste

The inconsistency of cinnamon odors is echoed by the most esteemed of cinnamon substitutes. Tonamomum cassia, cassia, or Chinese cinnamon, which grows wild especially in Tonkin and Annam in Indochina and in the Chinese province of Kwangsi. Its taste is described by Louis Lagriffe m his "Le Livre des Epices, des Condiments et des Aromates" as warm and very spicy," but "its odor recalls that of the bedbug." Cassia bark is thicker, rougher and paler than Ceylonese cinnamon bark, and its taste is less pronounced and coarser. If do not buy it in powdered form you will not confuse it with genuine cinnamon, for as a rule does not form quills, since it flattened and attached to wooden bases for drying. Actually, Malabar cinnamon is a rather inferior spice, which comes from Laurus malabathrou, which we may guess is the malabethron which the ancients used to sweeten the breath.

Large Genus

There are many other oppor-tunities for confusion. Cinna-momum is a large gen.'s, wide-spread in southeastern Asia and even present in Australia, which includes many other trees with aromatic bark popularly referred to as cinnamon for instance Cinnamomum lourenti, often called Salgon cinnamon, which some gourmets rate ahead of cassia for flavor. The small caper-like grains sometimes sold as cinnamon flavorers are usually cassia buds, though they may also come from other related trees; they are pleasant enough in themselves but for flavoring other foods, much inferior to

As though the botanists had not already done enough to confuse us, they have seized likeon the Romance language word for cinnamon cannelle in French: for still another genus. Canella. These are tropical American plants of aromatic bark, which might logically be called American cinnamon, but so far as I know are not. The most important is Canella alba. white "cinnsmon," of which, as is the case for cinnamon proper, the inner bark is used, which is true also of Canella winterana; both are employed as condiments. or medically in tonics. In this they again resemble genuine cinnamon, which has been granted medical virtues ever since the ancient Chinese included it in almost all prescriptions; it is still widely used in Chinese pharmacy. The Hebrews mixed cinnamon ath wine to reduce fever, and used it also in medicinal oils and salves. Dioscorides wrote that in combination with ginger, cinnamon was valuable against epidemics—epidemics of any kind. apparently. Though it appeared in many of their prescriptions, the ancient Romans seldom took it as a medicine; it was too rare and too expensive. An electuary. -a form of medicine more familiar to veterinarians than to doctors-based on cinnamon was used throughout the Middle Ages as an aid to digestion. The 13thcentury saint Albertus Magnus wrote that cinnamon cleanses the chest, calms coughs and for lies the liver. Thibault Lespleigney. the Toursine poet who was also both a doctor and a gourmet, wrote in his "Promptuaire des Médecines en Rithme Joyeuse":

so is well chosen connamon." "amber," we should probably read "ambergris," while well chosen cinnamon" presumably means the innamon of Ceylon.

It was inevitable that a spice so highly esteemed for its medical virtues should be put down as an aphrodisiac. The ancient Romans thought it was and in Renaissance Italy it was added to sherbet to stimulate jaded appetites of any kind.

"The Perfumed Garden." that 16th-century Arabian guide to erotica, called it. with unaccustomed restraint, simply a tonic," but included it among the ingredients of a complicated mixture held to possess potent properties, though its base was innocent green pea. The "Arabian Nights" names cinnamon as one of the elements in mixture guaranteed to enable husbands to render their wives pregnant. The Arab opinion that rinnamon, at least in combinations, has aphrodisiac properties, holds to this day, for it enters. with a large number of other "tonics," into the Algerian love potion called damamase.

For less restricted medical purposes, cinnamon was highly esteemed in the 18th century. when a medical manual stated that from it could be derived "an excellent cordial which uplifts and dries prevents rotting, resists poison, regularizes menstruation, aids digestion and prevents complications, shortens labor and hastens the delivery of the fetus." These impressive qualities inspired the inclusion of cinnamon in many medicinal compounds, not only such ordinary ones as laudanum, aromatic tincture of arnica and licorice water, but also in such pictursquely named—shall we say, patent medicines? - as Frescator's Diascordium, Garus's Elixir and, a little later and a little more seriously. Chaussier's Antiseptic Elixir, Todd's Potion (which helped the cinnamon along with a generous dose of alcohol), and the Codex Cordial Potion.

Modern medicine still granis cinnamon many merits, including the enormous one of presenting "no counter-indications"-in other words, if it does you no good, at least it will do you no harm. & Waterley Root instance, both can be used as industrial fuels. And natural gas has the advantage of being less polluting. The Iranians argued that the two fuels were com-petitive and that therefore they had to follow similar pricing pat-

The Iranians have been lead-ing the struggle among oil-exporting nations to resist any downward pressure on oil prices, despite the present surplus con-ditions in the oil market. Wide conversion to cheaper natural gas could over time increase oil orice oressure.

At a London meeting, called to study market conditions, oil-exporting nations decided last week to coordinate action to freeze present oil prices until the end of the year.

The Moscow-Tehran negotiations became so heated that at one point Moscow threatened to stop purchasing Iranian gas. But the threat had little effect. The Tranians simply intensified studies to seek alternative outlets. One possibility was to sell liquefied natural gas directly to Western Europe.

Iran's victory over the Russians has already started a movement in Algeria, which has agreements with customers in the United States and Western Europe that by 1980 will mean total exports of 80 million cubic meters a year. Noureddine Ait Laoussine, vicechairman of Sonatrach, the Algerian state petroleum com-

"Our customers are realistic people. With the price of oil already considerably higher, they fully realize that the price of natural gas cannot remain at its present price indefinitely. When economic conditions have profoundly changed, it is normal that contract signatories meet to discuss the problems and try to reestablish equilibrium." Vest reserves of natural gas are believed to exist in Siberia, and U.S. companies have shown an it ierest in developing these in a joint venture with the Soviet Union. The Russians have been demanding a high price, however— some $6 billion that the United States would have to put up to

Speculative Buying Said to Buoy Stocks

LONDON, Aug. 20 (Reuters).-Share prices recovered strongly today from a 16-year low set yescount from a 16-year low set yes-terday on the London Stock Ex-change, but sterling fell again. Stock prices regained some much-needed buoyancy to erase all of its big losses yesterday, when the Financial Times index of 30 shares fell below 200 for the first time since 1958.

The index gained 12.1 today to close at 211.9. Dealers said the upturn was mainly due to specu-lative buying at low prices, rather than any return of confidence.

Sterling, which has fallen steadily for a week in foreign exchange markets, slipped further today to $2.3197 from yesterday's

On the stock exchange, fears persisted, despite denials, that a large U.K. insurance company is in trouble and might suddenly start selling its holdings.

The chairman of the stock exchange, George Loveday, blamed the sharp drop in share prices in recent months on rumors and said he was very concerned by the decline. "Unless we really think we are witnessing the demise of the capitalist system, then there are a lot of very cheap shares in the market today." he

Bank of England Seeks Data LONDON, Aug. 20 (AP-DJ).— The Bank of England said today that it plans to ask banks for "further information" in pursuit of a closer supervision of banking activities.

The bank said the information requested will cover such items as: the maturity pattern of sterling deposits and claims, on lines similar to those already used for the periodic data on Eurocur-rencies; details of transactions with associated companies; provisions and standby facilities. The bank said its "requirements will not be uniform for all groups of banks but will be tailored to suit particular cases." A spokesman said the bank is approaching about 100 banks and deposit-taking companies exclud-ing the major clearing banks.

U.S. Target On Oil Seen Unworkable

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (AP)-In spite of efforts to become selfsufficient in energy during the next decade, the United States will still be importing one-quarter of the oil it consumes in 1985, John Sawhill, head of the Federal Energy Administration, said yesterday.

"I don't think the United States will ever become self-sufficient in energy. The question is how rapidly we can become reasonably self-sufficient," he said at the opening session of public hearings here on Project Indepen-imports to "25 per cent of our oil needs by 1985 and energy imports to 10 to 13 per cent of total energy needs" he said. "There will be no big drops in price, but no more big rises either in the short term, at As head of the FEA, Mr. Saw-hill is responsible for developing the nation's energy policies including Project Independence, 2 program for massive development of domestic energy resources originally aimed at energy self-sufficiency. "The initial concept of Project Independence was an overreaction to a crisis situation... but many experts seem to feel that its original target needs to be redefined," said John Lichtblau, head of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation. "Without Project Independence, the United States would become more dependent on (other) nations. With it, the United States will still need substantial imports for at least the next ten years." Emillo Collado, vice - president of Exxon Corp., testified. "Our reliance on foreign (imports: can be decreased from the present level of 18 per cent of total energy to perhaps 15 to 18 per cent by 1980. This level of energy independence is attainable only at prices substantially higher than what we have been accustomed to attach to energy supplies," said Atlantic Richfield's president T.F. Bradshaw. "It would not only be technically extremely difficult to achieve full import independence by 1980 or 1985, but the economic and environmental costs would be gigantie," Mr. Lichtblau said,

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Ford Motor Sees More Price Rises

Ford Motor Co. president Lee Iacocca says the $500 price hike figure being discussed for 1975 models is "not the end" of price increases on new cars. Ford so far has announced tentative plans for an 3 per cent hike, which would average about $420. But Mr. Iacocca says that Ford is now thinking of an increase more along the lines of General Motors Corp.'s $480, or 9.5 per cent, increase as a starter. Iacocca says he "stunned" to find the company's pre-tax profit down to less than $100 on its U.S. cars, with costs rising at over $50 per month per car. He cites continued rapid inflation as further evidence of the company's need for a big price increase" on 1975 models.

French banking and business community has welcomed a gov-

By Bavid Ely. G. P. Putnam's. 247 pp. 16.95.

president of a large company makes electronic civilian surveillance devices, he suffers from an inverted form of occupational psychosis. He feels that he is being watched. Mr. Nicholes, the retired founder of the company, had installed a monitoring device in the conference room so that he could continue to keep in touch with things, and now Haddock feels that his office too is monitored, as well as the apartment that the company provides for him.

His first reaction to being watched is paranoid. He is so self-conscious, so overenadowed by the image of Mr. Nicholas, that he loses his former confidence and all but abdicates his position turning over most of the important decisions to George Imry, the executive vice-president. For Haddock, surveillance is the equivalent of castration. His guilt feelings render him impotent.

Then the chairman of the board, a practical psychologist if ever there was one, tells Haddeck that if Mr. Nicholas is actually watching him it is only in order to urge him on Daddy is right here rooting for you. His here, rooting for you. His Oedipal conflict resolved, Haddock becomes a demon of efficiency and decision. As you can see, we are in the toils of a

Getting carried away with his job—the worst threat of modern technology—Haddock evolves a philosophy of surveillance, "We're shining the light of communications into dark places," he says.
"We're translating the unknown into the known." The human soul is being projected onto a monitoring screen. The intro-jected image of the parent—which has lost its power anyway—gives way to the sense of being watched, always, everywhere. People are beginning to live in a pornography of familiarity.

Haddock is not troubled by ethical considerations because, in his opinion, the mass of people have lost their privacy anyway in the crush of modern living. Their secret is out and it might as well be systematized. Those few rich-or privileged persons who still manage to retain a degree of privacy are regarded as hoarders. For the rest, life is a matter of survival, which is based on fear, which in turn is disarmed by surveillance. If my neighbor knows all, I fear him not.

If no one has any secrets, there is nothing to worry about, no scientifically predictable. Surveillance is our new god, the gauge of our conscience. It is also a form of touch, visual touch -a type of contact that runs a minimal risk of provoking the unpredictable. A brotherhood of mutual inspection will render obsolete such archaic social im-

WHEN Henry Haddock becomes pulses as love, altruism or patriotism. Loneliness will be abolished. Everyone will be a star on the screen, playing to a capacity audience.

> Haddock has a monitoring system installed in Imry's office. and with the secret information he collects-observation is power"-he learns to intimidate the vice-president. But then he becomes so fascinated by watching Imry that he cannot tear himself away. Compulsive watching, Mr. By suggests, can become a perversion of a perversion. The displacement of one's own existential awareness onto someone else becomes a trick of escapism This may also be a sardonic allusion to the writer's voyeuristic zole.

"Mr. Nicholas" is about as topical as a novel can be. need only look at today's headlines or remember a recently proposed plan to feed everyone's "dossier" into a computer bank-the ultimate triumph of bureaucracy. But its extreme pertinence is both the book's strength and its weakness. Mr. Ely's characters are the automations of his ideas. Only Haddock approaches three-dimensionality and he is most convincing when he is kept away from the other characters. As the bearer of the book's main burden, he is exhausted by his symbolism. Because he cannot do anything that is rated Xunfit for family viewing-he has no significant human exchanges

In fact, he regards such exchanges as irksome, as working overtime in the spectrum of surveillance. Mr. Ely has painted his character into a corner where no one can reach him. We have to be satisfied with metaphor when we hunger for action, for the pathos of human passion and confusion. Reading a book composed almost exclusively of ideas is like reading a manu instead of eating a dinner

In novels that center on one character, the prose tends to have but one flavor. Nor is a man talking to himself at his best. We need somebody else to irritate or exait us into eloquence. The suther may have intended to illustrate this very lesson in "Mr. Nicholas" but if this is so lie has proceeded by way of the imitative fallacy. In dehuman: ing Henry Haddock, Mr. Ely has robbed him of the quality that would have moved us to respond to him.

Archaeologists Unearth China's Oldest City

PEKING, Aug. 20 (Reuters). -Archaeologists in Chenghow, the capital of Honan Province in Central China, have pushed back the frontiers of early Chinese history with the discovery of remains of a 3,500-year-old city, according to the People's Daily.

The official newspaper said archaeologists had excavated a large area of piled mud foundstions and the site of the ancient walls of a city built during the early years of the Shang Dynasty. It is the oldest city ever discovered in China,

China Gives In

TEHRAN, Aug. 20 (Reuters). -China today rejuctantly agreed to conform with an International Amateur Swimming Federation (FINA) ban on its swimmers in the forthcoming Asian Games

China is not affiliated to FINA and the federation's executive committee ruled earlier this month that, in accordance with its ban on FINA members competing against non-members, the Chinese swimmers were ineligible to take part in the games starting on Sept. 1.

The chief of the Chinese sames delegation. Chao Cheng-Hung, announced here today China's decision to comply with FINA. Chao, who arrived here today with the second Chinese contingent, said: "Out of respect for the swimming circles of the Asian countries and territories and in particular our host country Iran, and to safeguard the unity of the people and sports circles of Asia, we have decided that our swimming team will not compete in the Asian Games for the time being."

China will be competing in most other sports here.

He was, however, among the forty possibles originally chosen by West Germany, and will be a useful man if Gerd Muller decided to give up club as well as international football.

In Brazil, there is an endless debate raging about the why and wherefore of their failure in the World Cup. Among the reasons being given are the alleged obstinacy of Zagalo, its coach, and the allegedly out-of-date,

Where the Brazilian critics may have a point, in their selflacerating frenzy, is in their claim that the three-month training camp is much too long. Rocket-Powered Car Sets Mark Ouicker Than Hair Can Be Dyed WENDOVER, Utah, Aug. 20 (AP).—A rocket car powered by hydrogen peroxide broke four world records yesterday on the Bonneville salt flats, reaching an average speed of 181.241 miles an hour over a quarter-mile course.

The Pollution Packer, driven by Vern Anderson, 35, broke both the time and speed records in the standing quarter-mile and the standing half-kilometer. It was the first time a rocket-powered car had attempted to break records on the salt flats. The time for the quarter-mile was 4.963 seconds. In the halfkilometer, the vehicle reached an average speed of 203,536 mph in 5,4925 seconds. This means the vehicle was going more than 400 mph at the end of the course.

The Pollution Packer is powered by a 90 per cent solution of hydrogen peroxide, the same chemical which, when used in more dilute mixtures, lightens hair, Anderson broke records set by Dave Anderson, who died last March when his car crashed during competition in Charlotte,

Gamblers Treated Well By NFL Team Doctor

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (UPI:.-The team surgeon for the New York Giants last season provided known gamblers with confidential information about player injuries, it was disclosed today when two members of an organized crime family were arrested on pro football bookmaking

Dr. Anthony Pisani, chief orthopedic surgeon for 10 years with the Guants before resigning from that position a month ago. has been mentioned in a 40count indictment but was not charged. Thomas Musto. 65. and Michael Astarita, 47. partners in an operation said to have handled more than $100,000 in octs on a football neekend, were formally charged in Manhattan Supreme Court with conspiracy in the third degree and bookmaking in the first degree, a felony carry-ing a possible penalty of three to years in prison.

Musto is a "soldier" in the or-ganized crime family formerly headed by the late Vito Genovese while Astarita is a onetime associate of the late Thomas (Tommy Ryan) Eboli, gubned down and killed in Brooklyn, N. Y., more than a year ago. Pisant's involvement with the two gamblers came to light during an intensive investigation which started last September by the Public Morals Division of the New York Police Department's Organized Crime Control Bu-

During the investigation, com-missioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League and Wellington Mara, the Giants' president, both were informed a probe was being conducted which involved Pisani. He resigned as team surgeon shortly thereafter. The conspiracy count against Musto and Astarita in the indictment was based on the charge "they conferred with Dr. Anthony Pisoni, New York Giants orthopedic surgeon, to increase their winnings above the customary bookmakers profits by acquiring certain medical information as to the physical condition of several New York Giants football players."

Court papers filed by District Attorney Richard Kuh's office charged that Musto and Astarita 'agreed to confer on a regular basis win Dr. Pisani throughout the (1973) football season regarding the extent and exact nature of injuries sustained by Ron Johnson, Carl Lockhart, John Mendenhall and other offensive and defensive players with the Giants."

Pisani is the chief orthopedic surgeon at St. Vincent's Hospital here and clinical professor of orthopedic surgery at Bellevue Medical College.

Dolphins Beat Vikings

MIAMI, Aug. 20 (UPI).-La Csonka plunged for two touchdowns in the first half last night and the Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins, starting most of their regulars for the first time this exhibition season, pounded the Minnesota Vikings, 21-9. last night, in a manner resembling last year's title game.

The first half especially-when both lineups were filled with appears in top form.

regulars—looked like a replay of the Dolphins' grinding 24-7 vic-tory over the Vikings in Super Bowl VIII.

Miami, which admittedly had a conditioning advantage as a resuit of the players' strike, took a 14-0 halftime lead as the Dolphins never let the Fran Tarken-ton-led Vikings threaten.

The Dolphins' advantage came when the National Football League Players Association called the 14-day "cooling off" period last Wednesday. Miami already had 34 veterans in camp; Minnesota had only six, Csonka scored on plunges of three and one yards. The Dolphins added seven points in the fourth quarter on an eight-yard reverse by rookie wide receiver Nat Moore before a crowd of 53.-144—the largest of the strikedamaged NFL preseason.

Minnesota scored on a one-yard plunge by Dave Osborne and a 27-yard field goal by Fred Cor. Both of Csonka's scores came up the middle. The first capped a seven-play 42-yard drive that started after cornerback Curlis

Johnson intercepted a Tarkenton pass and returned it 15 yards. Quarterback Bob Griese alternated Jim Kiick and Csonka on drives up the middle to the Minnesota 15. A pass to Howard Twilley in the end zone resulted in an interference call on defensive back Nate Wright, giving Miami the ball on the one. Csonks soon boxled over right guard for the score.

Czech Cyclists Once Again Top Russian Pair

MONTREAL, Aug. 20 (Reu-ters).—Czechoslovakia's Vladimir Vackar and Miroslav Vimazal showed their domination of tandem sprint riding here last night when they once again defeated Russians Vladimir Semenets and Victor Kopylov to win the gold medal at the world cycling championships.

As in San Sebastian, Spain, last year, the Czechs needed only two races to ensure their victory over the Russians, whose tactic of sprinting the last two laps was countered by some delicate blocking. The bronze medal went to Polish riders Andrlej Bek and Benedykt Kocot, who got the best of Dutchmen Rini Langkruis and Lau Veldt in a best-ofthree series.

The Dutch riders had tired themselves out trying to beat the Russians in the semifinals and could not match the fresher Polish riders,

The quarterfinals of the professional sprint provided the usual quota of thrills but no upsets. Australian John Nicholson, galloping inelegantly but very effectively down the final straight, easily disposed of Italian Ezio Cardi. But he now has to face the debate about whether it is fitting to jail an ex-President is so high-flown that one feels a bit timid about injecting some realism into it.

It is with considerable diffidence, therefore, that I suggest that the whole debate is silly. Those arguing for jail say no man can be beyoud the law. while those against it say it would be a terrible thing for the country to lock up a man who has been president and, anyhow, his unscheduled departure from the White House is punishment enough.

Nobody has yet asked the central question: Is locking the fellow up going to do any good? In the case of Nixon, or any other ex-president, the answer seems clear. It will not, There-fore, prison ought to be ruled

If we look at the American prison system, the overwhelming logic of this conclusion becomes manifest. The American prison is primarily an educational inestution. We send young men to prison and they come out finhed criminals, just as we send

EDUCATION

TO SPEAK FRENCH!

WASHINGTON .- Most of the other young men to Yake and turn them into bankers.

> A constant supply of criminals turned out by our prisons contributes to economic health by maintaining full employment in the police and the judicial industries, enriching lawyers and insurance companies, keeping social workers occupied and supporting large government bureaucracies,

Offering the benefits of prison education to former presidents, however, makes little sense. To begin with, they will invariably be too old to profit from it and repay the country with the long career of crime necessary to amortize the high cost of prison

When I hast saw the figures, the federal government was paying more to maintain a man in prison per year than it would cost to send him to Harvard. For an education as expensive as that, society is entitled to some assurance that he is going to be able to repay his debt to its prison-related industries The average ex-president will be in his late 50s or, more probably, in his 60s before he even enters prison. By the time he comes out, his useful criminal life will be negligible. No insurance company in the land would bet against actuarial odds like

A secondary purpose of prison is to provide storage space for poor people. In the criminal, legal and judicial classes, it is an established principle that the less wealth a felon has, the more time he must serve. This has the incidental political value of holding down the memployment statistics, but the main reason for it is that poor people, as all the data prove, are far more likely to go into crime than the well-to-do and, therefore, far more likely to profit from the benefits of a prison's criminal

Former presidents will almost invariably be far too well-heeled to qualify. If admission to prison were conducted like admission to Ivy League colleges, with a lot of hocus-pocus testing to determine the candidate's chances of succeeding, former presidents would be so obviously doomed to fathere that prisons would reject them without the courtesy of an interview at the admitting office.

When we consider, then, what orison in America is truly about, the question whether former presidents should go is easily answered. The answer is no. They are totally unqualified.

Modeling for Modigliani

By Jeffrey Robinson

TOURRETTES-SUR-LOUP, France (THT) —Sitting off the main square of this medieval Riviera village, near where the old men play boules, there's a hardware store that is really no different than most in France. Plastic buckets hang from the ceiling. Rope lies coiled on the floor. Paint brushes and postcards and rubber hoses block out the light from the open front door and the overcrowded front window.

In the rear of the store, behind a small desk, used as a counter for flashlights and ball-point pens and film, is a woman whose eyes look as if they had come from some forgotten Modigliani painting. They did.

"I first met Modigliani in Paris, just after I was married in 1918" Her husband was the French film star Gaston Modot whose credits included Pabst's "Three Penny Opera" and Bunnel's "L'Age d'Or." son and Modi had been friends from their Montmartre days a decade before. Of course I knew of him before I met him and called him Modi just like everyone else right from the beginning. He was a handsome man who was likable and most pleasant. He had done many sketches and portraits of my husband so it seemed quite natural that I should accept when he asked

While Mrs. Modot says the artist had referred to his early days in Paris as being quite difficult (at one point he was forced to return to his native Italy because his health had been nearly ruined), Modigliani's reputation was firmly established by the time they met. So was his drink-

"One friend of his used to say he drank to kill himself and that was the truth. He didn't stop until his entire body completely gave out. But I'm convinced that Modi somehow believed his painting depended on his drinking and that without alcohol and once in a while hashish or opium, he could not produce."

Of the work he did produce, as far as she can remember, six were of her. "I'm not too sure how many I posed for because was such a long time ago, but I think it was half a dozen. It was during the summer of 1919. We were in Nice and so was Modi and he came over to our house every afternoon to work. Geston, Modi and his wife Jeanne Hebuterne painted and sketched while I posed."

By that time his paintings were fetching large sums on the Paris market. In 1932 Mrs. Modot saw a portrait of herself in a gallery. She was in a yellow robe, seated on a large couch in front of a tapestry Her hair was flat and her eyes were half closed. It was the biggest oil he had ever done of her and she says if it has a title she doesn't know what it is. The last she heard, it was in a museum in New York.

The asking price in 1922 was 12,000 francs because, the gallery owner explained to her, it was one of the more colorful works of the artist.

"It's strange seeing a painting of yourself being sold for such a price. I looked at it and it pleased me, but I couldn't afford to buy it. Not that I ever thought of it as my own property, I didn't. I understood that Modi had a contract with a man in Paris so that everything he did was taken away, already sold. But I would have liked to have that one. Over that summer I managed to get a few things, some sketches and small portraits he gave Gaston and me as gifts. But I don't have them now either. They'd be very valuable today, I'm sure. There's nothing, though, I can do about that. It was all a long time ago."

She recalls there was one rather perplexing problem while posing for that big oil and the others. It seems her houseguest wasn't very neat. "I didn't mind sitting for the portraits or some nudes, but you should have seen my living room when he was finished for the day. There was paint on the rugs, on the furniture, all over us. He might have been likable but ne was an extremely messy painter."

Modigliani's original suggestion to poss was based on his admiration for faces Mrs. Modot does not like to sound immodest but she says that he was intrigued with her face. When she was younger, she says, people used to tell her she looked like a woman from a Gauguin painting. And although she won's disclose her age, (the best she'll say is "Je suis du siècle") whatever it was that Modigliani saw in her face Henri Matisse must have seen it 30 years later because he asked her to sit for a series of sketches.

"I hope you realize that I never modeled professionally. I only did it because friends asked me to. Actually it was very flattering. It was especially flattering when an artist of Modi's stature asked. I remember him in outlandish clothes with long hair and huge hats. But he wasn't what you might call eccentric. He just dressed funny . . . very lavishly . . . but a little on the strange side, too. However, he was basically a quiet type, never taken by his own success and never interested in whatever money he had. He seemed to love Jeanne very dearly and was true to her. The tragedy in his life was that he was just as true to his alcohol."

There was always some within reach of his easel. "It was mind blowing to watch. That summer he showed up with a Cognac bottle every day. He'd open it, then paint, then drink, then paint. When it was empty the afternoon's work was finished. worked quickly and didn't talk but he didn't stop drinking either. I'm sure he had no idea just how much he was drinking. It was so natural to him. He never offered any to us. He kept his bottle for himself and I'm certain that he thought of it as a part of his work. He was 35 then, sad, even with his funny clothes, and within six months he was dead (1920)."
